The white, puffed pigs' noses are made larger and lighter by the puffing process. This makes them easier to eat for all dogs, large and small. Yet, the structure of the pigs' noses remains substantial because the cartilage is left in the noses. This strengthens the jaw muscles of the dog and gives them hours of chewing pleasure.

The puffed pigs' noses clean the mouth and reduce dental plaque. They contain large amounts of protein, which is essential for all dog diets. None of the bacteria that may be present on the fresh ears can survive our long-term, high-temperature drying process.
